

Life Wouldn't Wait. I Couldn't Either.

"I've taken a pill every day for most of my adult life to prevent GERD, an acid reflux condition that causes heartburn. It was either that or a painful surgical operation that I didn't want. Plus, with my kids and work, I couldn't afford the long recovery time after surgery. The Institute for Minimally Invasive and Robotic Surgery, part of the Washington Hospital Healthcare System, changed all of that. Just a few hours after surgery I was walking and eating. And I went home the next day. I was back in my routine soon without taking my daily pill."
